roundly criticized the White House, the Trump administration, and Congress for pulling back a regulation designed to protect drinking water from the perfluorinated chemicals that have been linked to cancer and other health problems. In August, the Food and Drug Administration proposed a rule that would require manufacturers to prove that their products are safe for the food supply before they can enter the market. The rule, which would have taken effect on July 1, 2018, has been shelved, along with dozens of other potential food safety protections. The Environmental Protection Agency in April had proposed allowing companies to add or remove individual chemicals from the list of 17 additives in their products, including shortening the list from 10 to one. Companies use them to
