Briefly - it's a kind of a game, where you have to get deeper into your mind.

And you'll be able to prove that. It will be, of course, super cool, with oracles, riddles and amazing new music and sound effects. Also I'm going to make the most detailed and chill soundtrack ever, and you will be able to ask oracles about that. Smoother game experience when playing! Awesome

Soundtrack June 29, 2014 By Mary This game is so much fun! It is very creative and it is way more fun to play than most other game types. The only thing I would change about this game is that when it was first released it was very hard to navigate through the levels. Example For the game: Test: Level 1: Here is a link that can be used to get access to the game: "It must be a feeling of being lost and aware that you are lost. Lost that you are able to get the feel that you have never been here before. And also feel that you are looking upon everything with new eyes. And then the feeling returns that you are standing still. And you are moving." "Now you feel yourself as if you've lived a life time. And then the body is tired. And you walk towards the light." "We ask that you please rate in the discussion how did you feel being a part of Beyond the Mind.” “Describe the feeling of the game Beyond the Mind to you.” “Do you feel any change after this game?” “What is your favorite part of the game?” “Are you interested in creating your own game in the future? Do you want to create games?” Categories Contact Admin We have discovered an undesirable bug which prevents your question from being shown to the top players. All about the game

Greed: The Mad Scientist is a 2D mental therapy game in the vein of clicking and saving people. Around the Asylum, you will find various forms of lifestyle that exist around the world. Do you have what it takes to get the dr. to the top, and please note... when you are at the top, beware of the health bars, it will last for only one life!

As you can see the doctor is asleep, and the patient (you) needs to wake him up! Take control of the mad doctor, Greed, and begin your quest for happiness!

Greed: The Mad Scientist is a game based on the mental condition of Greed. Not knowing where I am, those choices should be done when and where I want. As long as you have the recipe for the desired item, you can go to the other side. This is an epileptic balance!

I encourage you to find it. To be happy and smile. This is the most important tool. You can know if I am happy or not. When it won't be funny or smiled.

Choose the Doctors reception room, and face the alarm clock. Set of other difficulty by combatants!

If you are one of the rare few that still know how to fight they will enjoy your damage.

SwapQuest is a puzzle platform game where you play as a group of fairies on a quest to restore the sunny land. To get there, you must discover a magic, endless board and break it into eight pieces. The pieces must be placed in four other ones like a puzzle, following the path of the sun. It's not easy, but once you have everything in place you can keep on going, and you will encounter many enemies, traps and challenges! When you play SwapQuest, you can really start the adventure right away, and you can play with your friends on their computers, tablets, phones or any other device without any limitation or restrictions. The original soundtrack is offered in two versions. You can choose the soundtrack that is in your copy of the game if it is available through Steam, or you can choose the soundtrack that is in the SwapQuest ZIP file if you download it. Empire Deluxe combined edition is a game about taking cities. Starting with just one, the city enables a commander to produce units. These units in turn can directly attack or support the attack of more cities. Your imperialistic desires are not satisfied until you have taken every city on the map. Then there is an added complication: There can be multiple opponents with the same goal. You cannot work with them to capture all of the cities. They don't want to work with you. You spend a good amount of time preventing them from taking your cities, and you try your best to capture their cities. So come back to the classic 4x strategy wargame that has inspired so many other games! Features include 4 Built-In Unit Sets, each a progression from the previous: Basic, Standard, Advanced and Enhanced. Anywhere from 6 to 30 unit types, some including land, naval, air, submarine, artillery, engineers, satellites, missiles unit types. 3 uniquely different AI players Optional additional rules and victory conditions. Maps of virtually unlimited size Play Solitaire or Against Humans in Hot Seat, Email and Network Play. Built-In map/scenario editor. Built-In Unit Set Modification Editor allows you to make adjustment to the unit sets. AI player source code available online to make your own AI players. World Building C# source code available online to make your own map makers. Hours of Fun, for many even as much as hundreds or thousands! And a game you may still be playing in 2045 on Mars. (Interplanetary play not yet implemented). 100 cities, 10 (11) unit types, a history of 32 years, 4 AI opponents, a game so in your face you can do battle and win almost every time. A game of both computer power and human competition. EDF, AU, EU, UK, Australian, and even Global politics all play a part, and the game never stops evolving. The goal is to reduce your opponents territory to 0 and your own to 100. Yes, a game about war, that challenges the best computers, and still gives you a skillful game without computers. Not only a game about war, but a game about cultural interactions, game design, game winning, and culture. Empire 5 (Empire Deluxe) is a board wargame that covers the entire globe. Play against human opponents, computer opponents, or both! Play one on one with a friend. Play solitaire. Conquer opponents across the world. Build an empire that will span decades

_ along with some of the major monuments. The settlement was pushed further south into pre-Etruscan Lavinium in the 9th century BC, as evidenced by the _hasta della Riforma_, a large Etruscan and early Republican-era sarcophagus, which was found on the site. In the 1st century BC Marius' father, Quintus Marcius Rex, became the first procurator of Lavinium. Marius, born at the time of the Social War in 509 BC and thus the grandson of the city's legendary founder, had distinguished himself in his career and inherited some of the glory and importance of his forebear; however, he did not devote himself to the city, which he appears to have neglected or misappropriated. During his governorship it also became unclear who was sitting on the land - the legal system of the Roman state would establish who owned which piece of land at the site. Once again, it seems that Marius' father failed to make decisions for the future of the city, and instead left it to be guided by a more centralised government. # LEAVING EARLIER TOWNS Ancient sources record a little about how some of the residents managed to leave Lavinium at the end of the 2nd century BC, but they also provide enough information to suggest that these people weren't the norm. Literary sources also suggest that, unlike some of its neighbours in Latium and early Rome, Lavinium did not have a good set of walls to protect its residents. First people to leave Lavinium in the Roman period were residents from Subura , probably part of the group of immigrants who arrived at the start of the 2nd century. Most people at this time were involved in the Clusinian conspiracy in 100 BC - a society of political exiles and stand-ins who helped bring down Tiberius' brother, Gaius Marius, a year later. Besides, Lavinium wasn't considered a good place and it was the end of the road for many Roman exiles. Centurions and others who had been exiled to Lavinium were later sent to other, safer locations. Vibius Lutatius Catulus and his family left, while also exiled L. Strabo called it 'the last despotism of the Republic' and Cn. Sentius Saturninus uprooted the families of his guards
