However, after Vash'jih attacked Orgrimmar, he was defeated by The Clashing Blades of Honor and his remaining lieutenants. Shortly after that, Vash'jih escaped through a gate to Plane of Penance, knowing that the secrets he possessed could defeat Vash'jih, and cause the Plane of Penance to be sealed forever. Knowing that the only way to defeat the keepers minions is to eliminate them individually, The Clashing Blades of Honor headed to Plane of Penance to find out what secrets Vash'jih knew. What the player did was to go through the mansion, fighting the minions that were used by Vash'jih to seal Plane of Penance, and preventing the keepers minions from destroying their world. Creating the FGF-Basic variant as an SLC-modified and therapeutic robot for prostate cancer. Tissue Engineering technologies hold great promise for regenerative medicine and translational research for oncology. Expression of mesenchymal cells, which are known for constructing the stroma, has been low in the prostate tissue of a rat model. The tissue fragments were transfected with FGF-basic vector and were transplanted to the dorsal side of a prostate. Transdifferentiation was confirmed for the engineered tissue, which was analyzed by an RNA/DNA-protein microarray analysis. Expression of SLC (soluble carrier) family members was particularly upregulated in the engineered tissue. Although SLC/cAMP signaling was known to be related to tumor growth, few reports have been found on the therapeutic potential of SLCs. This study revealed that the implanted organoid converted into the rat prostatic tissue after 2 weeks through the expression of growth factors, fibronectin, and calbindin-D28k. In a prostate cancer cell line (PC-3) and another rat model (a rat prostate tissue section), FGF-basic was detected to have a cell growth-promoting effect. These results suggest that the released FGF-Basic protein may have contributed to the regulatory activity during the regeneration of the prostate tissue. When a mutant FGF-Basic was engineered for an SLC-modified and therapeutic robot, it showed a low in vitro survival rate, owing to the fact that
