Q: how to close a .net studio database connection? how to close a .net studio database connection? is it .net studio is managing connection in C#? If so how to close the connection? I am making a TCP socket in server side and client side in C#. In the C# code I am accessing the database.

A: You can use the following to close and dispose of your connection and transaction using the System.Data.Common namespace. This is probably the preferred way to do this in most cases: using System.Data.Common; ... DbConnection conn = null; DbTransaction transaction = null; try { conn = new SqlConnection(...); transaction = conn.BeginTransaction(IsolationLevel.ReadCommitted); ... } finally { if (transaction != null) transaction.Dispose(); conn.Dispose(); }
